

Book Launch of COMPETITION AND DEVELOPMENT: The Power of Competitive Markets

Saturday, June 21 at 8:00 a.m.

Boardroom, Holiday Inn Hotel, 1980 Robie St Halifax.

Contact: Pauline Dole; cell: 613 864 6746

Join us for breakfast and meet the authors who will talk about the power of competitive markets in the developing world: How do developing countries cope with the “Walmart” effect where mom and pop stores are frozen out by large multinationals? How do poor countries once dominated by state-run enterprises handle globalization, trade liberalization, consumer welfare, cartels and monopolies? The IDRC book looks at a broad range of research that demonstrates the importance of true and fair competition for an effective marketplace. It provides an introduction to competition and competition law in developing countries by focusing on the practical problems that have been faced and the policies and practices that governments and citizens have taken to overcome those problems.